

I DON'T LIKE BEING GAY.

Ella Cowley-Andrea

Being gay should be easy because love in its simplest form is easy. It should be fun. Love should bring joy, it should brighten your life. Love should be light and suffocate you in all the right ways. Fill your every thought like an obsession.

People should love being in love.

Love shouldn't be a political issue.

Love shouldn't be a tool used to segregate people into categories.

Love shouldn't be so black and white - right or wrong.

Love shouldn't be a factor in a person's worth.

Why do we as a society have to corrupt something as innocent as love.

If I should love a woman or love a man, I shouldn't have to worry about the opinions of others. I shouldn't have to care about their approval. I should never have to worry about the negative backlash of immature loveless people.

But I do.

It's what we are indoctrinated to do.

I don't like it.

Society has made me self conscious about who I love. Constantly overstimulated by the eyes of others.

It's made me dislike being gay - being in love.
